

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are illiterate has declined by 100 million.

But the progress has been uneven. In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

In the United States, the illiterate population has declined by 10 percent since 1980. In the United Kingdom, it has declined by 15 percent.

